FRAGMENT FROM "THE OUTLAW MURRAY," AN OLD SCOTTISH BALLAD

(In which James Boyd, sent by the King to demand of Murray of Philiphaugh allegiance to the crown, meets that gallant outlaw and hears his defiant answer.)

James Boyd took his leave o' the noble King,
To Ettrick Forest fair cam' he;
Down Birkendale Brae when that he cam',—
He saw the fair forest wi' his e'e.

Of that fair castle he got a sight;
The like he ne'er saw wi' his e'e!
On the fore-front o' that castle fair
Twa unicorns were bra' to see;
The picture of a knight, and lady bright,
And the green hollin abune their bree.

Therat he spyed five hundred men,
Shooting with bows on Newark Lee;
They were a' in ae livery clad,
O' the Lincoln green sae gay to see.

His men were a' clad in the green,
The knight was armed cap-a-pie,
With bended bow, on a milk-white steed;
And I wot they rank'd right bonnilie.

1971276

Thereby Boyd kend he was master man,
And served him in his ain degree:
"God mote thee save, brave Outlaw Murray!
Thy Ladye, and all thy chivalrie!"—
"Marry, thou's welcome, gentleman,
Some King's messenger thou seems to be."—

"The King of Scotland sent me here,
And, gude Outlaw, I am sent to thee;
I wad wot of whom ye hold your lands,
Or man wha may thy master be?"—

"Thir lands are mine," the Outlaw said;
"I own nae king in Christentie;
Frae Soudron I this forest wan,
When the King nor his knights were not to see."—

"He desires you'll come to Edinburgh,
And hauld of him this forest free;
And, gif ye refuse to do this thing,
He'll conquess baith they lands and thee.
He hath vow'd to cast thy castle down,
And mak' a widow o' thy gay ladye."—

"Ere the King my fair country get,
This land that's nativest to me,
Mony o' his nobles sall be cauld,
Their ladies sall be right wearie." .

INTRODUCTION

The Murray Family is among the forty-nine "best families" selected by the American Historical-Genealogical Society for whom the Society has published family histories during the past few years. The Murray Family has been prominent in the British Empire and in the United States, its members having played important roles in war and in peace. Family pride is a commendable trait and should be cultivated. All Murrays have just cause to be proud of their family history and traditions.

In The Peerage of England, Scotland, and Ireland (London, 1790), we find the following regarding the origin and meaning of the name Murray:

"All our historians agree that the surname of Murray is amongst the most ancient of any in Scotland. Some derive their origin from a warlike people called the Moravii, who came from Germany, and are said to have performed many great exploits in Scotland, in favours of King Corbred I. against the Romans.

"Others are of [the] opinion [that] they assumed that surname from the county of Murray, where they had large possessions in very early times."

The latter opinion is substantiated in Lower's Patronymica Britannica where it is stated that "The founder of the clan of Sutherland settled in the 12th century in the province of Murref, Moray or Moravia, comprehending the modern counties of Murray or Elgin, and parts of Inverness and Banff whence the family for several generations assumed the name of Murref or De Moravia. . . . The name was carried to other parts of the country and is today one of our familiar surnames."

The data in this volume is gathered from reliable sources. We have selected what we consider the most important material. Many of the daughters and sons for whom no issue was shown have been omitted from the pedigrees. A missing symbol indicates that a name has been omitted. Those desiring further information are advised to consult the volumes mentioned in the list of References.

The compiler hopes that in producing this volume he is bringing to the Murray Family information which will be of interest and value to them, and that he is rendering an important service to the public. He and his associates will be glad to give their cooperation to members of the family who are interested in having a complete genealogy of the family published.

Unless otherwise plainly shown the persons in this volume whose names are accompanied by three figures are children of the immediately prededing persons bearing immediately preceding numbers. All persons in each group bearing the same letter as a part of their numbers are directly related. The generations of the descendants of those bearing numbers of three figures are represented as follows. However some of our material is published as copied from various records without rearrangement according to this system.

1st Generation	(1), (2), etc
2nd Generation	(A), (B), etc
3rd Generation	(a), (b), etc
4th Generation	1, 2, etc
5th Generation	A, B, etc

6th Generation	a, b, etc.
7th Generation	(I), (II), etc.
8th Generation	(i), (ii), etc.
9th Generation	I, II, etc.
10th Generation	i, ii, etc.

Abbreviations: add., address; b., born; ch., children; coll., college; d., died; d.y., died young; d.w.i., died without issue; dau., daughter; grad., graduated; l., lives, lived; m., married, moved; s., son, succeeded; d.s.p., died without issue; d.v.p., died before father; univ., university.

THE MURRAY COAT OF ARMS

A Coat of Arms is an emblem or a device which is displayed by titled persons, persons of royal blood, and their descendants. Coats of Arms were originally used for purposes of identification and recognition on the field of battle as well as in civil life.

It is claimed by some writers that Coats of Arms, in a crude form, were used by Noah's sons after the flood. There are records of other Coats of Arms, in one crude form or another, at different periods of ancient history. Heraldry, however, as we know it today, did not become of much importance until soon after the invasion of England by William the Conqueror, A. D. 1066. Heraldry became of general interest at about the time of the Crusades.

The Murray Coat of Arms shown in the front of this volume is the Arms of the Murrays of Philiphaugh, whose lineage is recorded from the thirteenth century. It has been used by many cadet branches of this ancient house and, with slight variations, by other large Murray families. Indeed, from earliest times, three silver stars or mullets upon a field of blue has been incorporated in the insignia of almost every armorial Murray family in Great Britain.

This Coat of Arms is described in Burke's General Armory, Burke's Landed Gentry, Burke's Peerage and Baronetage and many other reliable works on heraldry, in some cases accompanied by illustrations and pedigrees. It is the Arms of the family of Col. James B. Murray of New York City, and has been used for generations by his descendants and by several other American branches of the Murray family.

ARMS: Argent, a hunting horn sable, stringed and garnished gules, on a chief azure, three stars of the first. A silver shield bearing, below a blue band on which are three silver stars, a black hunting horn strung and decorated in red.

CREST: A demi man clothed in green, winding a huntinghorn proper. The upper half of a man,—clothed in green and blowing a naturally colored hunting horn.

MOTTO: Hinc usque superna venabor. (Latin). From henceforth I will follow on even unto things above.

Sir Bernard Burke, of Heralds College, London, said, "Heraldry is prized by all who can show honorable ancestry or wish to found honorable families."

Besides its family significance this Coat of Arms makes an excellent mural decoration and inspires the admiration and comment of all who see it.

It is quite appropriate that members of the Murray family who have a pride in their ancestry should display the family Coat of Arms, in proper colors.

ANCIENT MURRAY FAMILIES

The following titled Murray families are listed in Burke's General Armory: Bothwell, Co. Lanark; Touchadam and Polmaise, Co. Stirling; Tullibardine, Earl of Athole; Earl of Dunmore; Capt. Donegal; George Moore Murray, of Mexico.

Murray, Duke of Athole, Earl of Tullibardin, Etc.

By some historians this family is said to be descended from the Moravii, who came to Scotland from Germany. By others it is believed that they assumed their name from that of County Murray, where they had much property in very early times.

It is certain, at least, that the progenitors of this great and illustrious family had considerable estates, both in Perthshire and the northern counties, in the tenth and eleventh centuries.

A101 FRISKINUS DE MORAVIA: was proprietor of many vast lands and baronies in different counties, and made a great figure in Scotland in the reign of King David I who succeeded to the crown in 1124 and died in 1153. He had a son, A102 WILLIAM DE MORAVIA: got a charter, under the great seal of King William the Lyon, as Willielmo de Moravia, filio Friskini, of the lands of Strabrock, Duffus, Rossile, Inchikel, Macher, Kintrai, etc., all of which were possessed by his father, Friskin, in the reign of David I. The charter has no date, but as Felix, bishop of Murray, was witness to it, it must have been granted in or before the year 1171, in which that bishop died. William had two sons, between whom he divided his lands.

(1) Hugh—A103.

(2) William: from whom the Murrays of Pettie, Bothwell, etc., are descendent.

A103 HUGH DE MORAVIA: was in possession of the lands of Duffus, then the chief seat of the family. He had a son,

A104 WALTER DE MORAVIA: in an agreement about the division of some lands with Archibald, bishop of Murray, is styled Walterus de Moravia de Duffus, filius quondam domini Hugonies de Moravia, Etc., anno 1226. Walter was father of,

A105 FRISKINUS DE MORAVIA: master of Duffus; living 1248; had no male issue, but two daughters.

(1) Helen: m. Sir Reynold de Cheyne, who with her obtained the barony of Duffus.

(2) Christian: m. William de Federith.

In a charter by Malise, Earl of Strathern, to his sister Annabella, of the lands of Kincardine, the above Friskinus de Moravia de Duffus, together with Sir Malcolm de Moravia, are witnesses. The charter is dated at Selkirk the 28th of June, 22 King Alexander II. (1236). This Sir Malcolm was the undoubted ancestor of the Murrays of Tullibardin, and was son of Sir John de Moravia, high sheriff of Perth, who was probably a grandson of the first Friskin, and brother of Hugh, though we cannot, at this distance of time, positively ascertain the relationship. From Sir John, therefore (by good authority) we shall deduce the descent of this illustrious family, which has flourished in Perthshire for about eight hundred years.

A106 SIR JOHN DE MORAVIA, OR MURRAY: was sheriff of Perth in the beginning of the reign of Alexander II. He was succeeded by his son,

A107 SIR MALCOLM DE MORAVIA: by many documents still extant, he was in possession of extensive possessions in Perthshire and was high sheriff of that county. He had two sons,

(1) Sir William—A108.

(2) Sir John: made a donation to the abbacy of Balmerino in 1280.

A108 SIR WILLIAM DE MORAVIA: inherited from his father the lands of Lamabude (now Langvride). He m. Adda, dau. of Malise, seneschal of Strathern, and by her obtained the lands and estate of Tullibardin. These lands are still in the possession of the family, and continued to be the chief title until they succeeded to the honors of Athole. Sir William left one son,

A109 SIR ANDREW MURRAY: second baron of Tullibardin. Having joined the interest of the Baliols against King David Bruce, he was tried, condemned and beheaded at Perth, 1332, leaving issue a son,

A110 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: third baron of Tullibardin, left a son,

A111 JOHN DE MORAVIA: fourth baron. He got a grant, from Sir Alexander de Abernethy, Knt., of the lands of Pickerling, in Fife. He was father of, A112 SIR WALTER MURRAY: fifth baron. He obtained a charter of confirmation, under the great seal, of the lands of Tullibardin, Concusse and Pickerling, 1362. Sir Walter d. 1390, leaving a son, by his wife, Margaret le Baird.

A113 SIR DAVID MURRAY: sixth baron of Tullibardin, knighted by James I, 1424. He founded the collegiate church of Tullibardin and largely endowed it. The arms of Sir David and his lady, Isabel Stewart, are still to be seen in the church. He had Mariot, Christian, Isabel, and

(1) Sir William—A114.

(2) John: of Dryfall.

- (3) Patrick: from whom are descended the Murrays of Auchertyre, Woodend, Balmanno, Glendoick, the Earl of Dysart, etc.
- (4) James: ancestor of the Murrays of Strowan.
- (5) Alexander: ancestor of the Murrays of Tibbermuir.

A114 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: seventh baron, who was one of the greatest men of his time. He was sheriff of Perth under kings James II and III, was knighted by the latter, and was one of the plenipotentiaries in a treaty with the English, 1459. He m. Margaret, dau. of Sir John Colquhoun, Lord High Chamberlain of Scotland, and by her, it is said, had seventeen sons, from whom many different Murray families are descended. Sir William was succeeded by his eldest son,

A115 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: eighth baron, who was in high favor with James III, and was employed in concluding a treaty with the English in 1492. In his old age, Sir William had the full esteem of the king, who freed him from all attendance either on court or on the king's host. By his wife, Catherine, dau. of Lord Gray, he had Christian, Elizabeth, and

- (1) Sir John: m. Elizabeth Crichton; no issue.
- (2) Sir William—A116.
- (3) Sir Andrew: ancestor of the Viscount of Stormont.
- (4) David: m. Catherine Edmondstone.

A116 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: ninth baron. He received several charters from James IV for many lands. By his wife, Margaret, dau. of the Earl of Athole, he had Helen and,

- (1) William—A117.
- (2) Andrew.
- (3) David.

A117 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: tenth baron. He m. Catherine Campbell, of Glenurchy.

- (1) Sir William—A118.
- (2) Alexander: colonel in the service of the States of Holland.
- (3) James: of Purdorvis.
- (4) Andrew.
- (5) Annabella: m. John, Lord Erskine, afterwards Earl of Mar and regent of Scotland.
- (6) Eupheme: m. Robert Steuart; (2) Robert Pitcairn and, (3) Patrick Gray. Issue.
- (7) Jean: m. James Henderson, of Fordel.
- (8) Catherine: m. Robert Moray of Abercairnie.

A118 SIR WILLIAM MURRAY: eleventh baron. He was a great promoter of the Reformation and sat in the parliament, 1560, which established the reformed religion. Upon the queen's return from France he was greatly in her favor, had the honor to entertain her several times at Tullibardin, was one of her privy council and comptroller of the household in 1565. Sir William was one of the guardians of the young king and keeper of the castle of Stirling. He m. Lady Agnes Graham and had Margaret, Jean, and,

(1) John—A119.

(2) Sir William: of Pitcairly.

(3) Mungo: of Dunork.

A119 SIR JOHN MURRAY: twelfth baron; d. 1609. He was brought up in the court of James VI, held in high esteem by that king, and was one of his privy council. He was raised to the peerage, by the title of Lord Murray of Tullibardin—by letters patent, dated April 25th, 1604—and Earl of Tullibardin, July 10th, 1606. He m. Catherine Drummond, and had four daus., two other sons, and,

(1) William—A120.

(2) Captain John.

(3) Patrick: of Castletoun, on whom the title and honors of Tullibardin were conferred when his brother William resigned them into the king's hands. He m. Elizabeth Dent.

(A) James: fourth Earl of Tullibardin; m. his cousin, Lady Anne Murray, and had two sons who d. unm. and the estates and honors devolved on John Earl of Athole, his cousin and nearest heir male.

(B) William: a youth of much promise, was early engaged in the service of Charles I. He was taken prisoner at the battle of Philiphaugh and executed at St. Andrews, 1646.

A120 WILLIAM MURRAY: second earl, who was instrumental in the rescue of the king at Perth from the attempt of the Earl of Gowrie against his person. As a result, the sheriffship of Perth was conferred upon him and has mostly continued in the family of Athole ever since. He m. Dorothea Stewart, dau. and heir of the Earl of Athole, and had one son,

A121 JOHN MURRAY: Earl of Athole. Served with distinction throughout the civil war, and raised about two thousand of his own men for the king's service. He was confirmed as successor to the title of Earl of Athole under a new patent under the Great Seal, in which the king to "... admits ... and confirms the said John Murray to the sole undoubted lawful and just title of Earl of Athole, with all the dignities, etc., thereunto belonging, in all time coming, to be enjoyed by the said John, and his heirs, with the same order of dignity as it was possessed by the first Earl of Athole, brother to King James II." He m. Jean Campbell, and had one dau. and

(1) John—A122.

(2) Mungo: lieut. of his majesty's guards at the Restoration.

A122 JOHN MURRAY: Earl of Athole, who adhered firmly to the interests of Charles I and II. He was made Justice General of Scotland, 1663, captain of his majesty's guards, lord privy seal and one of the extraordinary lords of session. In further regard for his services, was created Marquis of Athole; m. Lady Emilia Stanley and had six sons and one dau. including,

- A123 JOHN MURRAY: Marquis of Athole. He was made secretary of state by King William in 1695, and appointed one of the privy council to Queen Anne in 1702. In 1713 he was chosen one of the sixteen peers for Scotland to the British parliament. He m. first, Lady Catherine, dau. of the Duke of Hamilton, by whom he had one dau. and,

PROMINENT BRITISH MURRAYS, PAST GENERATIONS

ADAM MURRAY: (d. 1700); defender of Londonderry; descended from the Murrays of Philiphaugh in Selkirkshire; when the protestants of Ulster armed against Tryconnel, 1688, Murray raised a troop of horses among his neighbors; during the siege was offered a colonel's commission and 1,000 Pounds on King James part, refused both. Gen. Richard Hamilton sent Murray's father to persuade his son that the town of Londonderry must be yielded, but he counselled unflinching resistance; finally Murray was badly hurt and the city relieved; though he did not himself seek any reward, Wm. III presented him with a watch; his name has been perpetuated by the Murray Club.

ALEXANDER MURRAY: (1736-1795); Scottish judge; b. in Edinburgh; called to Scottish bar, 1758; deputy-depute of the shire of Peebles three years later; in 1775 was solicitor-general for Scotland; in 1780 returned to the House of Commons for Peebleshire; commissioner of the court of justiciary; took his seat on the bench with the title of Lord Henderland.

ALEXANDER MURRAY: D.D.; (1775-1813); linguist; b. at Dunkelterick, Kirkcudbrightshire; did much to educate himself and mastered the rudiments of foreign languages; made a brilliant career at Edinburgh University; in 1808 succeeded the parish minister of Urr, and was very popular both as a man and as a preacher; in 1812, he was professor of Oriental languages in Edinburgh; received from the university the degree of D.D.; Murray wrote and translated many works.

AMELIA MATILDA MURRAY: (1795-1884); writer; stayed at Weymouth, and became known to George III and the royal family; in 1808 her mother was a lady-in-waiting to Princesses Augusta and Elizabeth, so Amelia was much at court; she developed into an excellent botanist and artist; interested herself in education of destitute and delinquent children; in 1837 was chosen maid of honor to Queen Victoria; later toured the U.S. and was a zealous advocate for the abolition of slavery; she published educational works and books on her travels.

ANDREW MURRAY: naturalist; b. in Edinburgh; educated for the law and for some time practiced in Edinburgh; in 1857 took the position, for one session, of prof. of natural sciences in New Coll., Edinburgh, becoming the same year a fellow of the Royal Society; in 1858-59 he acted as Pres. of the botanical society and abandoned, 1860, the legal profession to go to London; he was scientific director of Royal Horticultural Society.

LORD CHARLES MURRAY: (1660-1710); second s. of John, second earl and first marquis of Atholl; commanded Gen. Dalyell's regiment after the General's death; during 1684 engaged in the campaign in Flanders; present at the siege of Luxemburg; created by James II, Earl of Dumore, Viscount Fincastle, and Lord Murray of Blair, Moulin and Tillemot; after accession of Queen Anne, he was sworn a privy councillor; gave constant support to the union with England; governor of Blackness Castle, 1707.

CHARLES MURRAY: (1754-1821); actor and dramatist; s. of Sir John Murray; b. at Hertfordshire; studied pharmacy and surgery in London; played as an amateur in Liverpool; made his first professional appearance at York; went to Covent Gardens in London; Murray was especially noted for the dignity of his old men.

DANIEL MURRAY: (1768-1852); archbishop of Dublin; he acquired the esteem of the archbishop of Dublin, John Thomas Troy and was consecrated his coadjutor, 1809; acted for a time as pres. of the Roman Catholic Coll. at Maynooth; on the death of Archbishop Troy; Murray succeeded him; enjoyed the confidence of successive popes, and was held in high respect by the British Government.

SIR DAVID MURRAY: (1567-1629); of Gorthy, poet; in 1600 he appears to have been comptroller of the household of James VI; was very learned and accomplished and was a special favorite of Prince Henry; Charles I bestowed on him the estate of Gorthy, Perthshire.

DAVID MURRAY: second Earl of Mansfield (1727-1796); diplomatist and statesman; graduated from Oxford; he entered the diplomatic service; was attache at the British Embassy in Paris, 1751; in 1763 Murray was sworn into the privy council; was for nine years envoy extraordinary at the imperial court where he enjoyed much of the confidence of Maria Theresa and the Emperor Joseph. Mansfield was an eminently able and honorable diplomat and statesman; a ready and powerful speaker.

LORD GEORGE MURRAY: (1700?-1760); Jacobite general; served during the rebellion of 1715 with the Jacobites; for some years an officer in the army of the king of Sardinia. He was very prudent and practical, the cause of many unexpected victories. The victory at the battle of Falkirk was due very largely to Murray's discretion and sagacity. Various letters, memorandums and journals of Murray's are in the archives of the Duke of Atholl.

LORD GEORGE MURRAY: (1761-1803); bishop of St. David's; the fourth s. of John, third Duke of Atholl; graduated from Oxford; being interested in the telegraph, he made many improvements in that machine; in 1795, he was introduced to the king; conversed at length with him on the subject; direction of the telegraph at the admiralty was given him; died three years after his election as bishop of St. David.

SIR GEORGE MURRAY: (1772-1846); general and statesman; in 1795 was aide-de-camp to Major-General Alex. Campbell; was engaged in the battles of Talavera, Busaco, Fuentes, d'Onoro and Vittoria; was quartermaster-general in Ireland; on the escape of Napoleon from Elba, Murray obtained leave to join the army of Flanders, but various delays prevented him from reaching it until Waterloo had been fought and Paris occupied; was Governor of Edinburgh Castle and governor of the Royal Military Coll.; Murray also served as gov. of Fort George, North Britain.

GRENVILLE MURRAY: (1824-1881); journalist; educated at Oxford; entered the diplomatic service; in 1851 he was sent as an attache to the embassy at Vienna; three years later his "Roving Englishman" appeared; Murray contributed to Vanity Fair; started a weekly journal known as the Queen's Messenger.

HUGH MURRAY: (1799-1846); geographer; devoted his leisure to literary pursuits; published "The Swiss Emigrants" and wrote papers on Central and Eastern Asia; published the "Encyclopaedia of Geography." Murray is referred to as "an eminent geographic, whose extreme modesty prevented his being known and honored as he deserved to be."

SIR JAMES MURRAY: Lord Philip Laigh (1655-1708); lord clerk register of Scotland; sat in the convention of estates which assembled at Edinburgh; was close political friend of James Douglas, 2nd Duke of Queensbury and is described by Lochart as "by far the most efficient and trustworthy man he advised with;" succeeded Earl of Seafield as clerk-register.

JAMES MURRAY: (1732-1782); author of many religious writings; gained his D.D. at Edinburgh; before having his own church, Murray served as tutor and assistant minister; his followers built the High Bridge Chapel where he labored zealously for the remainder of his life.

JAMES MURRAY: (1725?-1794); general; governor of Quebec and of Minorca; commanded a brigade at the siege of Louisbery, Cape Breton in 1758; Wolfe wrote of him—"The public is much indebted to him for his great services in advancing this siege." He was one of the three brigadiers under Wolfe in the expedition against Quebec; was governor of Quebec and when Canada was finally ceded to Great Britain, Murray was made governor; served on the Irish staff; Murray held Minocra against De Crillon with very few soldiers,—ill fed and five hundred out of six tainted with disease, in spite of bribery offered by De Crillon.

SIR JAMES MURRAY: (1788-1871); discoverer of fluid magnesia; b. in Londonderry; studied medicine in Edinburgh and Dublin. The success of his work on his treatise "Heat and Humility" led the Marquis of Anglesy to appoint him his resident physician and knighted him; Murray established a manufactory for fluid magnesia which still exists.

SIR JOHN MURRAY: (1718-1777); secretary to Prince Charles during the rebellion of 1745; after the death of Sir David Murray of Stanhope, without issue, Sir John succeeded to the baronetcy.

JOHN MURRAY: (d. 1820); chemist and physicist; a native of Scotland; educated at Edinburgh, where he rose to eminence as a lecturer on natural philosophy, chemistry, materia medica and pharmacy.

SIR JOHN MURRAY: (1768?-1827); eighth baronet of Clermont, Fife-shire; general, Scots guards; served in Flanders as aide-de-camp to field-marshal Freytag; in 1799 Murray was British commissioner in the Red Sea; was quartermaster-general of the Indian Army, and went to Egypt; joined Sir Arthur Wellesley's army in Portugal, in 1809, and distinguished himself at the passage of the Douro; served with the army in Sicily.

JOHN FISHER MURRAY: (1811-1865); Irish poet and humorist; earliest productions printed in Blackwood Magazine—to which he was a constant contributor for many years; his writings exhibit great satirical power and in their day were widely popular.

MUNGO MURRAY: (d. 1770); writer on shipbuilding; published in 1754, a "Treatise on Shipbuilding and Navigation," later publishing an enlarged edition and at some later date "Four Prints"—which are in the Br. Museum.

PATRICK ALOYSIUS MURRAY: (1811-1882); catholic theologian; in 1838, was professor of belle-lettres at Maynooth; 1841 was given the chair of theology, which he held for forty-one years; nearly 2,000 priests passed through his class; Murray was also a poet of ability.

SIR TERENCE AUBREY MURRAY: (1810-1873); Australian politician; b. at Limerick; educated at Dublin; went to New South Wales with his father in connection with the mounted police there, helped to repress bush-ranging; sat in the legislative assembly for Argyle.

THOMAS MURRAY: (1792-1872); printer and miscellaneous writer; Thomas Carlyle, Alex Murray and he were early friends; destined for the church, but after preaching for some time he took to literary pursuits; estab. in 1841 the printing business of Murray & Gibb; the firm became their majesty's printers for Scotland; the business proved most successful and still flourishes.

WILLIAM MURRAY: first Earl of Mansfield (1705-1793); judge; after a brilliant school career, was admitted to the bar at Lincoln's Inn; argued before the House of Lords in the case of Paterson v. Graham; other Scottish briefs followed; in 1742 entered parliament as a member for Yorkshire; proved himself the ablest defender of the government in the House of Commons; in 1754 Murray became attorney-general to the Duke of Newcastle's administration; was lord chief justice of the king's bench and was created Baron Mansfield; mem. of the House of Lords, acting, for a time, as speaker of the House; in 1776 Murray was advanced to an Earldom.

AMERICAN MURRAY FAMILIES

Col. James B. Murray

COLONEL JAMES B. MURRAY: (b. 1789; d. 1866); was son of John B. Murray (b. 1756 in Norfolk County, England, d. 1828), who emigrated to America, where he immediately entered the counting house of Clark & Nightingale in Providence, R.I., whose senior partner was his first cousin and had been brought up in his father's, Dr. John Murray's, family in Norwich,—the leading physician there, and founder of the Norwich Hospital.

“At the outbreak” of the Revolution, John B. Murray sided with the Colonies and joined “the Providence Cadets,” commanded by the “junior member of the firm,” Colonel Nightingale. This corps was summoned to march to Lexington when the news reached Providence of the intended seizure of that place by the British troops, but they heard of its capture and the return of the royal troops to Boston, before they arrived. He subsequently served on the Quartermaster-General's staff under his friend, Colonel Ephraim Bowen, and was attached to the Marquis de LaFayette's command when he invaded Newport.” He “then received the appointment of Agent of Prizes and remained in Providence until the close of the Revolutionary War.”—(Autobiography of Col. J. B. Murray, p. 8.)

In 1783 he formed a partnership with John P. Mumford and Oliver Bowen (brother of the Colonel), and established two commercial houses, one in New York City and the other in Alexandria, Va.,—where he married Martha McClenahan. Occasionally he had charge of exporting the crops of the estate of General Washington (a few miles distant, at Mt. Vernon), who, at times visited at his house, stopping in to take a cup of tea before riding homeward;—when, as his mother afterwards told him, the General took her babe (James) on his lap.

In 1792 John B. Murray discontinued his Alexandria house, and removed to New York City.

His son, James educated to enter Columbia College, and accepted in 1804, was taken down with bilious intermittent fever which almost carried him off and so enfeebled him as to forbid study. His father thereupon chose for him a commercial career.—(Ibid., p. 20.)

In 1808, his uncle George W. Murray was drafted in the artillery to march to the Canadian line. As he had a family and was engaged in large business, James volunteered to take his place, and thus entered the artillery as a private. Service was of short duration, but sticking to his colors, he was soon elected a corporal.

Sent in 1809 as supercargo in his father's coppered (then a rarity) ship, the Egeria, to Archangel, and having made a very profitable trip, he was at 21 (in 1810) admitted to the partnership. In 1811 he went to Washington to make himself acquainted with political affairs and their probable outcome.

In June 1812 war was declared against England. His regiment of artillery, the Ninth, in which he was now a 2nd Lieutenant, volunteered unanimously, and in September was stationed at Fort Gansevoort on the Hudson River until January, 1813, when they were relieved and allowed to return to business. Meanwhile, the Egeria had been captured by the French in the Baltic and carried into Norway, but was finally liberated.

Sent to Denmark to look after the Egeria's cargo and the firm's interests, the Russian Minister at Washington made him a special bearer of dispatches relative to mediation by his Government with a view to peace.

Reaching London via Lisbon he presented his credentials to Prince Lieven, the Russian Ambassador, who gave him every facility in the prosecution of his northern journey, which he continued in a British armed cutter to Gothenburg on his way to Copenhagen. There he disposed of the Egeria's cargo, and reinvesting its proceeds and shipping in Swedish bottoms, the capture was turned into a profitable operation.

Returning to Gothenburg, he there met Count Alexander Orloff, one of Emperor Alexander's ministers, who insisted on his joining their party on a cutter engaged to carry them to England. He also met Captain (afterwards Lord) Byron, cousin of the poet; Henry Grattan, the distinguished advocate and statesman, and many others. Returning he again bore with him Russian dispatches.

Meantime his company of artillery had been organized into a battalion and he had been elected a captain. In June following, he was appointed Inspector of Cavalry for the State of New York, with rank of Lieut.-Colonel.

In 1814 he raised a company of 84 men and in September was again summoned to the field. Their term of service expired in December. Upon its expiration, he married Maria, dau. of Isaac Bronson of New York City, "with whom," as he wrote in his autobiography, "I passed a life of uninterrupted happiness for thirty-seven years."

With peace declared in January, 1815, and the resulting failures on both sides of the Atlantic, he was again called upon to go abroad to protect the credit of the firm and select a new correspondent in London. Leaving his young wife he sailed for Liverpool in May, and having accomplished his objectives, returned in September.

In 1817 he was promoted to the rank of Colonel, in command of the 14th Regiment, N.Y. State Artillery.

In 1825, the year of the cotton panic, his father withdrew from the firm and left the business with him, which was by no means his desire, as he had little taste for the hazards of commercial life. His preference for investment in well selected real estate over commercial affairs, was shown in 1828, when, as he wrote, "During that year I relinquished the prosecution of any regular commercial business and turned my attention to real estate." (Id., p. 54) In fact he used to say, "Ninety-five per cent of those who embark in business fail."

Crossing the Atlantic often, he wrote:

"Quite unexpectedly, I was induced to accept a mission to England, and on March 16, 1843, accompanied by my daughter Maria, took passage. . .for Liverpool." The morning after arrival "we proceeded to London and took up our Quarters in Regent Street.

"My daughter formed some pleasant acquaintances among my former friends, and a few days after our arrival we received an invitation to assist at a Grand Review in Hyde Park. We were here" admitted within "the privileged circle, where we found the kings of Belgium and Hanover, Prince Albert, the Dukes of Wellington and Cambridge, with many English and Continental officers of rank. Our namesake the Hon. Charles Augustus Murray, recognizing us, was very civil and useful in giving us the names and titles of those by whom we were surrounded, and very soon we were recognized by Lord Morpeth, who had seen us from his sister's, Lady Dover's, balcony, which looked upon the Park. He brought us an invitation from her ladyship to partake of a dejeuner after the review, and we accordingly went to the house, where we met a large and distinguished party, among whom were her sister, the Duchess of Sutherland, and family.

"On the following day the Duchess and her daughter called on Maria, as did Lady Dover and another sister, Lady Howard, and my daughter was made the recipient of numerous civilities, especially on the part of the Duchess of Sutherland, who invited us to a dinner. . . . The Duchess also invited us to the Caledonian ball, of which she was lady patroness, and took Maria on to the dais, introducing her to the 'Iron Duke' and other noted people. The next Sunday she took us to the Temple Church, then recently repaired and embellished. While at a dinner party in London I was seated next to Mr. John Gladstone (father of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone), then in his eightieth year and full of vigour, who on discovering my name and identity told me that he had dined at my father's house in Broad Street, New York, in 1793, just fifty years before, and he even identified the locality of the house—a wonderful evidence of memory. The next day he called on us with his daughter and arranged with us to dine with him at his residence in Carlton Gardens, where we met his son, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and other interesting persons. Thus after the lapse of half a century and at a distance of 3,000 miles, returning to the son the civility he had received from the father."—(Autobiography 62, 63, 64.)

At the end of his autobiography appears the following:

"Three days before his death, he asked that the Christian sacrament should be administered to him by his pastor, . . . saying he had never united with any church, though he had sometimes felt it his duty to do so. (Id. p. 91). His son Bronson recorded his last words, 'I am transmuted! Mortals! Mortals! Open the windows, and let me go'."

Seven children survived him, Maria, wife of Cambridge Livingston, Bronson, John B., Caroline, Agnes, Washington and Anna, wife of William P. W. Dana.

Colonel Murray did not smoke. He kept his bright mind bright. He did not touch liquor save possibly once in a while at table. He rarely played cards,—never for money.

Washington Murray

WASHINGTON MURRAY: (b. 1828; d. 1867); was the son of Colonel James B. Murray and Maria Bronson, both of representative New York families.

He graduated from Yale in 1849 and from the Harvard Law School in 1851. He was admitted immediately afterward to the bar in New York City, where he at once commenced practice. He became a member of the firm of Mott & Murray in 1853; of Mott, Murray & Harris in 1858; and of Murray and Miller in 1865. He followed a varied practice, in which he was eminently successful. He was popular among members of the bar, and his high professional and private character was universally recognized.

He was for several years a trustee of public schools in the 18th ward, and was a member of the Union Club. He was only at the threshold of his career when his early death at the age of thirty-nine ended a life of great promise.

In 1856 he married Eliza B. W. Dana, one of the belles of Boston.

This sketch would be incomplete were the religious side of his life not mentioned,—whose permeating influence was the secret of his high standing and success. He was an unobtrusive but fine follower of his Master in daily life,—as could even be seen in his countenance. In his Sunday School class of young men there grew up and developed at least one outstanding future right hand man to later ministers in his church, the late Mr. Charles M. Earle,—who, in turn, in his own Sunday School class, afterwards carried on a similar work.

The motto on the family coat of arms reads, “Hinc usque superna venabor,” of which one rendering is, “From henceforth I will (hunt) press on even unto things above.”

He did not smoke, touch liquor, or play cards for money.

Bronson Murray

BRONSON MURRAY: (b. 1817; d. 1911); was the son of Colonel James B. Murray, of New York City, and Maria Bronson, dau. of Isaac Bronson of that City and Bridgeport, Conn.

When between eight and nine, he was sent to boarding school at Jamaica, L.I., for two years, where, as he later wrote, he “became acquainted with fever and ague. . . together with the rudiments of education.”

In 1832 he entered Columbia College, where he remained for two years. During the first year his father required him to pass an hour a day at a carpenter shop; and during the second, to attend a lecture class on civil engineering, conducted by a graduate of West Point.

“In 1834”—when 17—“his father gave him three dollars and started him out to work as a rodman for an engineering party working on the Morris Canal from Newark to Jersey City. Thus began his professional life of civil engineer which lasted some ten years . . . on numerous jobs from New York to Michigan. The experiences of these years, in the newly devedloping West gave him a confidence and a poise that were striking characteristics” during later years.—(University of Illinois Semi-Centennial History, Vol. I, p. 141.)

The later enterprises failed; and owing to the panic of 1837, the prospects of railroad construction finally vanished. The year 1844 found him, ten years after his start, with occupation gone and means exhausted.

Undaunted by these reverses—which deprived him of livelihood from his profession, and left him penniless—he went West and, although he knew nothing of agriculture, settled on some 1600 acres of raw prairie in Illinois belonging to his father and went to farming. A receipt he carefully preserved shows that on his way out, he purchased in Chicago a wagon and harness for the munificent sum of $12 and some cents.—(Ibid., p. 141.)

On July 11, 1848, he married Anne E. Peyton, the soprano in the church choir. (She was the dau. of Col. Rowzee Peyton of Richmond, Va., who had moved to Geneva, N.Y.) With his bride he returned by stagecoach to Chicago, by canal boat to Ottawa and by team to his farm at Farm Ridge, about ten miles south of town.

A daguerreotype taken about this time, shows by his intelligent, eager, confident eyes and nervy posture, the indomitable spirit of the man, saying plainer than words, "Whatever anyone else can do, I too can do."

A firm believer in the future of the rich U.S. Government prairie lands of Illinois, he steadily invested everything in them and reselling, prospered.

Keenly realizing its need, he became deeply interested in a movement for Industrial Education started about that time. Some ardent souls in Illinois, such as Prof. Jonathan B. Turner, Dr. John A. Kennicott, and others engaged in an effort to establish in Illinois, and in each of the other states, an industrial and agricultural university to give to the farmer and to mechanics, instruction and life-work equipment, similar to those enjoyed by professional men; and he was thus early thrown into contact with those pioneers.

To start those universities, a land grant from Congress was proposed.

Illinois, while not first in time, led the fight. It was uphill work. Prof. Turner was the animating spirit,—to whose daughter he later wrote: " 'Your father was the soul, spirit and battle axe during all the fifties, of the movement favoring Industrial Education'."—(Id., p. 133.)

Of this struggle and the part he took in it, let history tell:

"The establishment of the Industrial League, which was devised and suggested by Mr. Murray, was most important for the work the Illinois men were endeavoring to carry forward. It was soon to be a power in moving the public mind toward the ends desired by the friends of industrial education. Turner said of the League: '(It) gave us a name, a power, and a foothold.' He said that Murray proposed it."—(Id., p. 43.)

"The first public proposal for the organization of the Illinois Industrial League was made at the third Industrial Convention at Chicago, Nov. 24, 1852. The author of the idea, as has been noted, was Bronson Murray of Ottawa. In a letter to Turner dated 'Ottawa, Nov. 18, 1852,' he stated his purpose; 'I have concluded to start the league at the Convention. . . I propose the object of that league to be, the dissemination of knowledge or information upon the subject of the University and the securing of its creation by the Legislature by means of publications, . . . lecturers to visit all parts of the state, and the defraying of expenses incident thereto. . . .' "(Id., p. 58.)

"Among the leaders taking part in the third Convention were: Bronson Murray of Ottawa, who was chosen president; John A. Kennicott of Cook Co., John Gage of Lake Co., John David, Ira Porter" and others. "Jonathan Turner was not present."—(Id., p. 44.)

The fourth Industrial Convention "assembled in Springfield, January 4, 1853." "Bronson Murray of LaSalle" (County) "was made president" and also chairman of the business committee.—(Id., pp. 48, 49.)

"Another important event of January, 1853, and in large measure a result of the two recent industrial conventions, was the formation of the Illinois State Agricultural Society" (now the Illinois State Agrecultural Board) . . . "organized on January 5, . . . in Springfield. Among the organizers and leading spirits were Bronson Murray, John A. Kennicott, J. B. Turner, . . . and others who were leaders in the movement for Industrial Education."—(Id., p. 55.)

“Immediately following the chartering of the League by the legislature in February, 1853, Turner, as principal director, entered into a contract with Dr. R. C. Rutherford to lecture throughout the state in the interests of the League.”—(Id., p. 58.)

“Meantime Turner and Murray were exerting themselves to finance the work that was now upon them. It was fortunate for their undertakings that Mr. Murray was a man of considerable wealth and was willing to use some of it in this cause. Time and again, as shown by his correspondence with Turner, he backed up the work of the League by loans, by giving his own personal checks and by granting the use of his credit. Turner relied greatly upon the good judgment and executive ability of his friend Murray.”—(Id., p. 59.)

“Late in November, 1853, . . . Bronson Murray went to Springfield . . . to attend an editorial convention before which he urged the importance of newspaper interest in behalf of agriculture. The editors agreed to assist. While there, Murray, after consultation with friends, decided it was best that Turner should be provided with a sufficient sum to enable him to become a lecturer for the League. Immediately he started a subscription paper to raise $1000 for Turner’s salary for a year. Each man was to give $20. Murray was one of the five to sign at once. He then wrote Turner what he had done.”

“That he was to become a travelling lecturer was by no means pleasant news for Turner and it was . . . still less pleasant for his family who entered a vigorous protest against it. His friends . . . thought it would be ruinous to his business . . . and so thought Turner. He wrote Murray, however, . . . ‘Life is short and soon over, and our work must be done and if we do it well, it will matter little to us through what trials and self-denials it is done a thousand years hence’.”—(Id., p. 66.)

“On Christmas eve, 1853”, Turner wrote Murray, “ ‘I have just returned from Jerseyville—rode twenty-two miles down in a two-horse wagon without cover or seats, on the bottom—coldest day this season. . . . Rode all night home . . . in the same way—and have got well paid for my cold, jolting, and watching.’ ”

“The results were that he signed 150 membership diplomas with the prospect that 500 more would be called for later: . . . he saw the county organized and a county league superintendent or agent chosen; and above all by this trip he won the certain support of Jersey, Green and Macoupin counties.”—(Id., p. 67.)

Advised by Lyman Trumbull, U.S. Senator from Illinois, Oct. 19, 1857 (see letter, p. 93) that a land grant bill would receive better support if asked by an Eastern state, “Turner and his associates selected Representative Justin S. Morrill of Vermont as the man to introduce the bill,” and “immediately . . . Turner forwarded to Morrill all his papers and documents.”—(id., p. 94.)

“On Dec. 14th, 1857”, the Industrial University land grant bill “was introduced” in the house “by Representative Morrill.”—(Id., p. 94.)

“The preparation that Turner and the Industrial League had been making for years became now suddenly tremendously effective. For all over the country, from individuals, from county and state agricultural and horticultural societies, from county courts, from boards of supervisors, from clubs and other organizations, and from state legislatures, petitions and memorials came in great numbers to Congress.”—(Id., p. 98.)

“On January 8, 1858, Turner wrote Bronson Murray: ‘If this appropriation is secured in the form proposed the poor despised Illinois League will have done more for the true cause of American Education on this continent than all the other associations and forces that ever existed on it and the Pilgrim Fathers to boot’.”—(Id., p. 98.)

The Industrial University land grant bill passed the House 105 to 100 (p. 108). Introduced in the Senate and championed by Mr. Wade of Ohio, it passed, 25 to 22 (p. 109); but was vetoed by President Buchanan. (p. 111.)

Reintroduced by Mr. Morrill in 1861, but reported on adversely by the committee on public lands, he was unable to get it before the House.—(Id., p. 123.)

Finally Mr. Wade of Ohio introduced Senate bill 298 (p. 123) which after a bitter fight passed the Senate “32 to 7” (p. 126) and then with Mr. Morrill’s support passed the House, “90 to 25,” and on July 2nd, 1862, was approved by “President Abraham Lincoln.”—(Id., p. 126.)

“This bill, as finally passed, was practically as it was when first introduced.” (p. 126.) It provided a grant of public land to each state for “the endowment, support and maintenance of, at least, one college where the leading object shall be . . . including military tactics . . . to teach . . . agriculture and the mechanic arts . . . in order to promote the liberal and practical education of the industrial classes in the several pursuits and professions in life.”—(Id., p. 585.)

Under this Act, Illinois received from the U.S. Government, a grant of 480,000 acres of land (p. 616) and founded the “Illinois Industrial University” (now “University of Illinois”), incorporated February 28, 1867, by Act of the General Assembly.—(Id., p. 590.)

Each other state similarly received a grant, together totalling nearly 11,000,000 (10,929,215) acres (p. 616) resulting in the founding of thirty-six such State Industrial Universities and Colleges and in the establishing of similar branches or departments in already existing universities or colleges in the remaining twelve states.—(Id., p. 618.)

“So far as is known, this was the most magnificent endowment of higher education ever made in one law by any political body.”—(Id., Intro., p. xi.)

Its area (17,077 sq. miles) exceeded the combined areas of Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island, with two more Rhode Islands thrown in.

Their 1928 catalogues show that in 1927 there were attending at twenty-six of those thirty-six universities and colleges over 63,000 students. The same ratio for the other ten (not reporting) would be over 24,000—together, about 87,000. And proportionately at the branches in the remaining twelve states, would be over 29,000 more, making in all about 116,000,—or to be safe, say 100,000—attending those forty-eight institutions.

In the chapter on “The Men Who Led,” the first life-sketch is that of “Jonathan Baldwin Turner;” the second, that of “Bronson Murray,” relating:

“Like his associate in the struggle for Industrial Education, Bronson Murray was an eastern man. Although born to wealth and station in the city of New York, . . . his own education caused him to feel acutely the need of education for the farm, and the practical industries; hence he eagerly endorsed Turner's plan. His most significant work was as originator of the Illinois Industrial League and ardent supporter of it; he was also one of the founders of the Illinois Agricultural Society and for a time" its "corresponding secretary."

"He stood staunchly by Turner through the hard years of conflict, giving freely of his money, labor, influence, and encouragement. When Turner's eyes failed and he was compelled to deliver his addresses blindfolded, he was led to and from the halls by Bronson Murray, tall, very straight, very patriotic in appearance, called the handsomest man in Illinois. When misfortune came to Turner, it was Murray that was always the first to offer his assistance. After the cowardly firing of Turner's buildings in 1853, Murray wrote offering to send him 'a pair of good nags' to use until spring. He adds that while he has no money on hand he expects to have $500 or $1000 at any time as the result of a land sale, and he courteously makes it clear that it will be a joy to him to lend it to Turner."—(Id., p. 138.)

"While a modest man he was too intelligent to underrate himself. When Turner spoke to him in high terms of his ability, he replied:

" 'What you say of my ability is flattering to me. I know I have never been stalled and that I have braved experience from the silken chambers whence I emanated to savage wilderness of Arkansas ruffians and woody swamps. That experience trains a man to know his capacity for action though it may not, to judge how others view him.' "—p. 139.)

On "February 7, 1863, the following communication from John Kennicott was printed in the Prairie Farmer:

" 'Though intended for me only, I pray you print this letter from Professor Turner. . . . Turner, Murray and I, with a few others did labor night and day for the boon now within reach of the state.' "

"The letter from Turner to Kennicott" reads:

" 'I suppose you see by Governor Yates' message that this long deferred endowment to each State in the Union, for an Industrial University has at last come within our reach. It has cost you and friend Murray and myself many a hard struggle and contest, with both professed friends and foes; many long days and nights of painful toil and thought, and care and travel by land and water in past years, first to arouse and concentrate the public mind, break down its opposition, and break up its still more fatal apathy, . . . and then . . . of guiding the thing through . . . Congress . . . All this you well know, and no two men on earth do know it, or ever will, but yourself and friend Murray, and you may each of you well and truly say, 'Pars magnae fui;' and though no reward on earth awaits you, I know you will meet it in another world, for you have surely been 'faithful in these few things.' "—(Id., p. 100.)

A strong anti-slavery man, friend and firm supporter of Abraham Lincoln, Bronson Murray aided in the preliminary organization work of the Illinois Republican party in 1854, preceding the definite organization of that party in 1856; and we find his name on the records of the convention called to meet in Springfield, in Oct., 1854, as one of "the committee on resolutions," consisting of "N. S. Greer of Lake County, John J. Morse of Woodford, Erastus Wright of Sangamon, Dr. H. K. Jones of Morgan, Bronson Murray of LaSalle" . . . ten in all, who prepared the resolutions adopted by that convention next day.—(Chicago Inter-Ocean, Oct. 25th, 18—, Issue No. 216.)

"In an article published just before the Presidential election of 1860, the old Chicago Democate spoke of the convention at Springfield of 1854 as marking 'the birth of the Republican party of Illinois.' "—(Id.)

About 1856, he moved from the farm at Farm Ridge to a residence "Rose Hill" on the bluff, a mile north of Ottawa. He furnished the parlor with a handsome rosewood set selected by a relative for him at Roux, then the leading maker of fine furniture in New York City.

That fall his second son, Peyton, 5, the flower of the family, passed on.

Attending revival services held in Ottawa that winter by Evangelist Avery, he united with the church. Early in the winter of 1858 he moved East, and temporarily occupied his father's, Col. James B. Murray's, summer home at Greenfield Hill, Conn. Designed for summer occupancy only, it had no heating plant, and that severe winter there came a day so bitter that the children had all to be kept in bed. That bitter day Bronson Murray drove an open wagon to Bridgeport, five or six miles away, to get a large base burner to heat the house. So bitter was the day, he met but a single traveler on the road, but he brought the stove back with him.

The next spring he moved to Fairfield, Conn. For some time a close student of the Bible, he there taught in Sunday School a class of young men. About 1862 he moved to Stamford, Conn., for better schools; about 1866 to Newport, R.I.; and in 1868 back to New York City, where he bought a house and lived until, on January 5th, 1911, in his 94th year, he passed on, leaving behind him five children, James B., Caroline, wife of Lucius K. Wilmerding, Olivia, wife of William Bayard Cutting, Archibald, and Anne, wife of C. Wickliffe Yulee.

Bronson Murray did not smoke; his mind was clear as a bell and strong to the last. He did not touch liquor until, in old age, he would, at long intervals, have a little brought him at table. He rarely played cards,—never for money.

Honest as the day is long; true as steel; his word was as good as his bond.

PROMINENT MURRAYS OF AMERICA, PAST GENERATIONS

ALEXANDER MURRAY: naval officer; b. Chestertown, Md., 1755; his grandfather, an adherent of the Pretender, settled in Barbadoes, and his father was a physician of Chestertown, Md. Alexander went to sea at an early age and commanded a vessel in European trade when eighteen years old. In 1767 he was appointed lieutenant in the American Navy. His last appointment was the command of the Philadelphia navy yard.

ALEXANDER MURRAY: Canadian geologist; b. Perthshire, Scotland, 1811; s. Anthony, of Crieff, a landed gentleman; was educated at the Royal Naval College, Portsmouth, and served in the navy from 1825 until 1835, when he resigned. His work in connection with demonstrating the relations of the Huron series of rocks to the formations of lower Silurian age attracted wide attention. He wrote a treatise on the geology and mineralogy of Newfoundland after he had made an extensive geological survey.

DAVID MURRAY: educator; b. Bovina, N.Y., 1830, of parents who came to this country from Scotland in 1818. He was superintendent of the schools and colleges of Tokyo 1873-79, by appointment of the Japanese government, and under his supervision the present elaborate system of public education was established. He received various degrees and honors, including the decoration of the Rising Sun, from the Emperor of Japan, in 1878, and was editor of a volume on Japanese Education (N.Y., 1876), besides several other books.

ELI HOUSTON MURRAY: Governor of Utah; b. Breckinridge Co., Ky., 1844; was appointed U.S. Marshal for Ky. in 1866 and held the office until 1876; was appointed Governor of Utah by President Hayes in 1880 and reappointed by President Arthur. He opposed the encroachments of the Mormon Church and the advance of polygamy.

HANNAH LINDLEY MURRAY: translator; b. N.Y.C., 1777; dau. of a native of Penna. who settled in N.Y., before the Revolution, and was a successful merchant for over fifty years. She was an accomplished linguist, made translations from several languages, painted, and wrote verses and hymns.

JAMES MURRAY: Governor of Canada; b. Scotland, about 1712; 4th s. of Alexander, Lord Elibank; entered army at early age, and became Lt.-Col. of 15th foot regiment, 1751. He served as Governor of Quebec, and in 1763, was appointed Governor of Canada. Later he returned to England; became Governor of Minorca, 1778; General, 1783; and Governor of Hull, 1785; colonel of 21st fusiliers in 1789. General Murray made a gallant, but unsuccessful defense of Minorca in 1781, against the Duc de Crillon's French and Spanish force, and rejected the French general's offer of a bribe of 1,000,000 Pounds for the surrender of the fortress.

JOHN MURRAY: soldier; b. Scotland about 1731; purchased land near town of Dauphin, Pa., 1766. He was an ardent patriot and, in 1776, was first to be appointed to command a company in Col. Samuel Miles' "rifle regiment." He was made lieutenant-colonel of the 2nd Penna., participating in several battles, including those of Germantown and Brandywine.

JOHN MURRAY: clergyman; b. Atton, Hampshire, Eng., 1741; m. to Cork, Ireland, when eleven years old; was chaplain to the R.I. brigade that encamped before Boston in 1775.

JOHN MURRAY: clergyman; b. Antrim, Ireland; 1742; educated in Edinburgh; held Presbyterian pastorates in Philadelphia, Boothbay, Me., and Newburyport, Mass. He was on several occasions instrumental in effecting exchange of prisoners.

JOHN CLARK MURRAY: Canadian educator; b. Paisley, Scotland, 1836; educated at the universities of Glasgow, Edinburgh, Heidelberg and Göttingen, and contributed to "Chambers' Cyclopaedia." In 1862 he was appointed professor of mental and moral philosophy in Queen's Univ., Kingston, Canada.

JOHN O'KANE MURRAY: historian; b. Glenariffe, County Antrim, Ireland, 1847; studied medicine in University of City of New York and practiced in Brooklyn; was conversant in six languages. He was author of several books, including a "Popular History of the Catholic Church in the United States" (1876), in commendation of which Pope Pius IX sent him a medal and a personal letter.

LINDLEY MURRAY: grammarian; b. Swatara, Pa., 1745; eldest s. of Robert Murray, who afterward became the greatest N.Y. merchant of ante-revolutionary times. He studied law and was admitted to the bar, but when the Revolution began, he retired to a Long Island cottage and spent four years in fishing, boating and fowling. Regretting these wasted years, he returned to New York in 1779 and entered into commercial speculations, under the direction of his father, with such success that at the close of the Revolution he was able to retire with a fortune to a beautiful place on the Hudson, three miles from the city. He was the author of many books, including "The Power of Religion on the Mind" (1787), which was very successful and passed through 17 editions.

NICHOLAS MURRAY: clergyman; b. Ballynaskea, Ireland, 1802; ran away to the United States in 1818; became a protestant and was ordained joint pastor of Presbyterian churches in Wilkes-Barre and Kingston, Pa. He was a founder of the N.J. Historical Society and, in 1850, was Moderator of the General Assembly of his church.

ROBERT MURRAY: Surgeon; b. Howard Co., Md., 1822; grad., Jefferson Medical College, 1845; was appointed assistant surgeon in U.S. Army, 1846. He received brevets of Lt.-Col. and Colonel, in 1865 for meritorious service during the Civil War; was made Surgeon-General, 1883; and retired, 1886.

WILLIAM HENRY HARRISON MURRAY: author; b. Guilford, Conn., 1840; grad. Yale, 1862. He became pastor of the Congregational Church at Boston in 1848.

WILLIAM VANS MURRAY: diplomat; b. Cambridge, Md., 1762; served in Maryland Legislature and in Congress. In 1797 President Washington appointed him Minister to the Netherlands, and in 1799 President Adams made him Envoy to France.

MURRAY CENSUS OF THE UNITED STATES

The compiler of these records has made up a list from city and telephone directories of the United States, and from other sources, as follows:

Alabama	73	Maine	52	Oklahoma	65
Arizona	20	Maryland	135	Oregon	18
Arkansas	31	Massachusetts	949	Pennsylvania	916
California	803	Michigan	371	Rhode Island	157
Colorado	122	Minnesota	145	South Carolina	10
Connecticut	322	Mississippi	15	South Dakota	8
District of Columbia	141	Missouri	196	Tennessee	129
Delaware	31	Montana	56	Texas	254
Florida	132	Nebraska	78	Utah	37
Georgia	67	Nevada	13	Vermont	25

Iowa	144	New York	1759	Wisconsin	113
Kansas	58	North Carolina	47	Wyoming	3
Kentucky	86	North Dakota	9		—
Louisiana	41	Ohio	516	Total	9643

To secure an estimate of the "Murray population" of the United States, the figure as follows:

Only about half the names were taken from each directory consulted 2

Half of the Murrays resided in the rural districts or in small towns having no printed directories which were available to us 2

There is an average of more than four persons in each American family 4

Since Murray daughters marry and have as many descendants as the Murray sons, there are as many descendants of "other names" as there are bearing the name Murray (though it is much easier to locate the latter) 2

By multiplying each figure of the column into the preceding figure, we have a total of 32

Conservative estimate of the Murray population of the United States, one-half of whom bear the name Murray and one-half of whom bear other names

308,570

The estimated Murray population of any of the states may be obtained by multiplying the figures shown by 32. There are Murrays in every state of the Union. The Murray population of the British Empire is probably equal to that in the United States.

FAMILY HISTORIES

by J. Montgomery Seaver

Price: $3.00 each

The volumes in this series, although far from containing a complete history of the family, should prove extremely useful as a starting point for the compilation of such a record. Printed census records, war rolls, genealogies and town histories and many other printed works were combed for mention of each surname. As source material from printed authority, these bring together in one volume what could be found only in widely scattered printed sources and makes the information readily and conveniently available. Valuable information or at least clues to the same can be found in these volumes.

Notably, each volume includes the coat-of-arms; a record of ancient families of the name; a list of prominent members of the family—past and present—in both the British Commonwealth and the United States; a record of those of the name tracing descent from royalty; a record of the first emigrants to America and the first few generations descended from them; a list of those bearing the name who fought in the American Revolution; and other information including a list of the references consulted in the preparation of the work—which in itself is an extremely useful guide to where further information may be secured.
